In Case You Missed It...

The snippet shows the Military.com logo at the top. Below it is the article title "It's Time for the VA to Approve Service Dogs as a Treatment Option". Under the title are social media sharing icons for Facebook, Twitter, Google+, Pinterest, Email, and a plus sign. Below the icons is the K9s For Warriors logo and a photo of a woman sitting on a rocking chair with a large white dog. The dog is wearing a harness with a sign that says "DO NOT PET BARCASH".

This month, K9s For Warriors was featured on Military.com in an Op-Ed written by our CEO. Based on our most recent study with Purdue, this feature focuses on our push on the VA to approve service dogs as treatment for veterans suffering from Post-traumatic Stress Disorder.

Supporter Event Spotlight

The Chad Layman Fine Earth Adventure Race just took place for the third year in a row! The challenging obstacle course brought hundreds of people together to benefit K9s For Warriors, and we are grateful to all who took part. Check out this recap video to see all the mud, sweat and tears that went into making this a success.
